MAINLAND swimmers who are here to compete in the national championships this week are so pleased with the Honolulu visit that they are already putting out propaganda to try to have the 1933 championships here.

The 1932 title event could not be given to Hawaii next year because it is Olympic year, but the boys figure it will be time to visit the islands again in 1933.

The girls who came here for their national championships in 1929 were very anxious to come again this year. In fact, several wrote to friends in Honolulu asking them to stir up a movement to have the title event for 1931 in Hawaii.

The bid was already in for the men's championships, however, and the members of the swimming committee could not see their way clear to bring the girls.

The swimmers have a great time at Waikiki beach while not practicing at the pool. In fact all of them take a trial at surfboard riding and are not satisfied until they master the art well enough to catch a wave.
