Famous Kuhio Racing Canoe Retires To Museum

The famous Prince Kuhio racing canoe shifted its berth Friday morning and took up new quarters in the Bishop Museum. For many years this was the champion outrigger canoe at Waikiki. So great was its power (mana), so the story goes, that no matter how green its crew, or how seasoned the paddlers in riva canoes, it always won.

In accordance with the wish of the late Prince Kuhio, to whom the canoe belonged, this famous racing craft was left to the Bishop Museum to be preserved for future generations to study and admire. Until Friday morning it was housed at the Outrigger Canoe club.

Stories and legends are many concerning this racing canoe, its powers and its accomplishments. The museum desires very much to gather these together and preserve them along with the canoe. Racing enthusiasts are invited to furnish their tallest yarns.

---

manslaughter in an automobile accident. J. Garner Anthony is counsel for the defense.

Trial jurors of Judge Lymer's division of the federal court will report for duty at 9 o'clock Monday morning. For trial at that time is the case of William Russell and Albert Holt, former police officers, charged with a violation of the narcotics act. Willson C. Moore, assistant district attorney, will prosecute, while Judge William H. Heen of the law firm of Heen & Godbold will appear for the defense.