BUT WHERE TO TRAIN?

When club swimming coach Barry Yap was asked for the latest on the sport he said "Well, we stopped swimming during the paddling season and there was no training at all. We'll probably resume training in November in preparation for the AAU sponsored meets in January. So tell anyone in the club who is thinking of entering those meets that it's not too early to be giving some thought to cutting down on hamburgers and malts and the late, late show on TV."

Barry has not been idle this summer, however. He has been busy with young son Bret and his duties as representative for New York Life Insurance Co. Then on July 27th along came son Blayne. Bret is quite sensitive about being so much older than Blayne and ended the interview with:

"Just say that I'm around two." Barry hasn't said yet whether he'll enter his sons in the January races, but if he does it's a cinch that the club will have at least two swimmers who won't break training.

Barry's wife is the former Joanne Kekuewa and they're living at Kaaipau St. in cool Manoa Valley. "Close to Punahou," Barry says.
