Try a Riesling Wine at Sunset

The riesling is one of the oldest, white wine grapes. The Romans know the importance of the riesling, planting it extensively in the river valleys of Germany.

Charlemagne saw a hill where the snow melted first and planted the riesling which is now the famous Schloss Johannesburg Vineyards. This same grape variety is grown in the United States and is called the Johannesburg Riesling. However, only Germany can bring the riesling to perfection.

Germany's far northern climate produces high natural acidity. This is balanced by the richness achieved by South facing slopes receiving reflected warmth from the rivers. The result is a wine of character, fruit and balance. The question in America, however, is when to drink it.

German wines are best enjoyed by themselves before dinner as an aperitif or after dinner with dessert. German wines are also excellent with light dinners such as fish, salads, veal and pork.

Next time try a bottle of the Graacher Himmelreich Spatlese on the Club's wine list. This wine is made by one of the most famous growers in Germany, Dr. Thanish. He owns a part of the famous Bernkasteler Doctor Vineyard. The Graacher Himmelreich is in the same class as the famous Bernkasteler Doctor.

Enjoy a bottle on the Hau Terrace at sunset or before dinner at your table. You will not be disappointed.
