FORECAST

Issued by the
BOARD OF DIRECTORS

FORECAST — Ed Greaney, Chairman; Norman Godbold, III, Harvey Wilson, Pat Wyman, Traylor Mercer.

DUPLICATE BRIDGE

During the past month the Duplicate Bridge game has had several of the top flight Mainland players as guests. The game is becoming more and more popular and the prizes are greatly admired.

December 17th will be the December Master-point and Christmas Party. Bridge players should not miss this.

The Jonathan Club in Los Angeles has advised us that effective January 1, 1959 they will discontinue reciprocal relations with all clubs. We shall miss this affiliate.

Be sure to make your reservations early for the three big events—

KEIKI PARTY
CHRISTMAS DINNER
NEW YEAR'S EVE

and be assured of happy holidays.

Club CLOSED on NEW YEAR'S DAY. However locker rooms will remain open.

Makaha Championships Begin

More than 200 surfers representing Hawaii and the mainland vied for top honors at the International Surfing Championships held at Makaha on November 22-23 and 29-30.

The Waikiki Surf Club, sponsor of the annual meet, held the individual eliminations in the morning and afternoon of November 22-23 due to the unusually large list of entrants.

The first events scheduled were the Men's Senior Open, Men's Junior Open, Women's Open and tandem surfing—all major events in the meet.

The finalists met for the championships in the final weekend of November to compete for individual rather than team honors as has been the case in the past years.

The victors may stand a chance of flying to Lima, Peru for further surfing meets of international scope scheduled for the near future.

The Outrigger Canoe Club's Kehau Kea reigned as the 1958 Queen of Makaha Surfing as well as vied for top honors in the women's event.

Miss Kea and Cynthia Hemmings have been perennial standouts from the Outrigger Canoe Club.

Other top competitors from the club ranks are Rabbit Kekai, Butch Hemmings, Fred Hemmings, Jr., Peter Balding and Ron Sorrell.

Spotters have reported that surfing condition in the area were good going into the championship weekend. In addition to the regular run of good day surf, the rules committee had high hopes of running night surfing on November 22 and 29. The torch carrying surfers have always provided many thrills for views in past years.

Giant searchlights are used to flood the beach area with light for the event.

A rundown of individual winners and color of the 1958 International Surfing Championships will be available in your January edition of the Forecast.

A new arrival for the Paul Fosters (Rona Ann Danford) on Nov. 4 weighed in at seven pounds, 11 ounces, a girl.

It was a boy for the Charles Lake family, born Sept. 30, weighing six pounds, four ounces.

Word has been received that Lani Nicholls was married on Sept. 5 to Albert M. Krauss. They are both teaching at Viewpoint School in Amenia, N. Y.

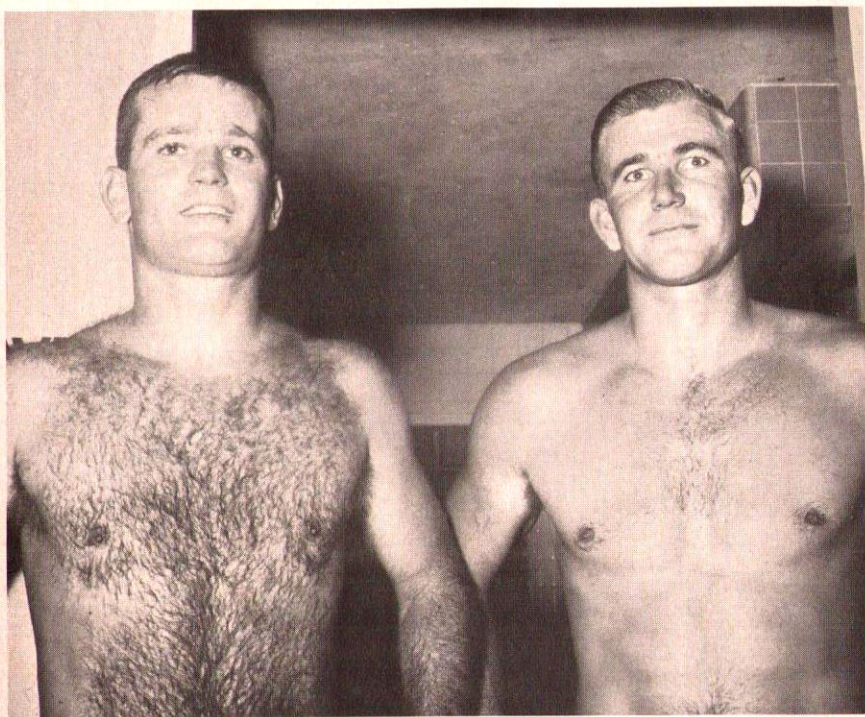

The Jonathan Club in Los Angeles has advised the club that effective Jan.

1 it will discontinue reciprocal relations with all clubs.

The Buildings and Grounds Committee has passed a resolution commending Jake Tudor's management. It reads:

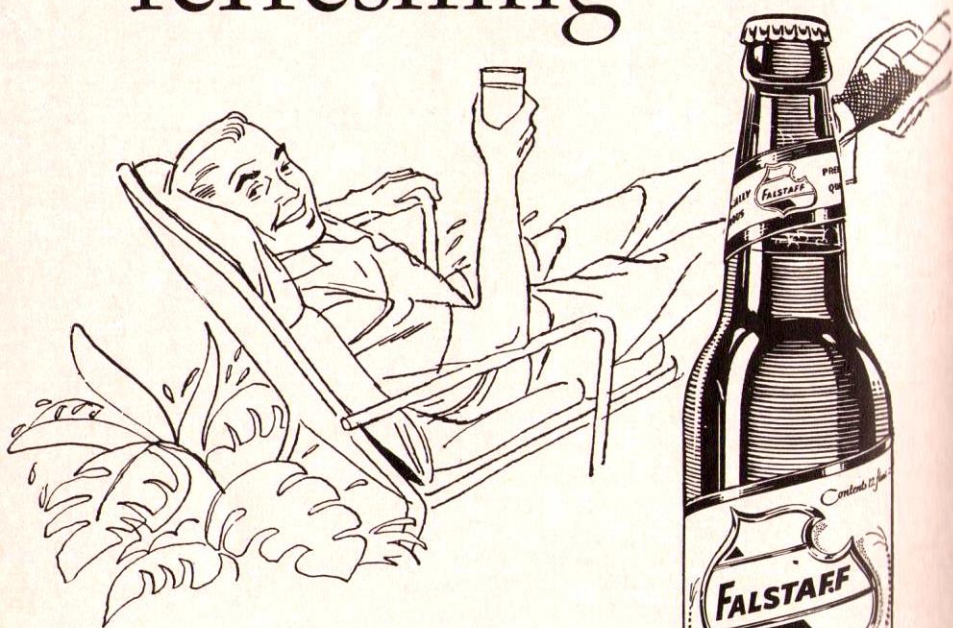

"Resolved that this committee commend Edgar S. J. Tudor for his superb work in the management of the Outrigger Canoe Club, in the quality of the meals, the appearance of the club, and the making of the club more enjoyable for the membership."

Andy Gunnard, new member from Washington state, is busy opening up his Aloha Liqueurs on Hart St. The company is turning out Kona coffee liqueur with a "Made in Hawaii" label for mainland export. Andy is a former silent screen director.

PARTIES HIGHLIGHT YULE SEASON

The Christmas holiday season brings a flurry of party activity from Santa's knapsack to the Outrigger Canoe Club.

Club manager Jake Tudor has announced that the Outrigger's three "traditionals" will be bigger and better than ever before.

Members of all ages are already making their reservations to attend the keiki party, the annual Christmas Day Open House and the season finale—the gala Christmas Day Party at the Outrigger.

Santa Claus—who arrives in Honolulu aboard everything from jet aircraft to submarines before his official reindeer flight on Christmas Eve—steps ashore from an outrigger canoe on December 19 to touch off festivities at the keiki party.

The fun begins at 5 p.m. with Santa distributing presents to all youngsters and oldsters attending. Dinner will begin at 7 p.m. accompanied by music and entertainment on the club lanai.

Tickets for the many adults (often having as good if not better a time than the keikis themselves) go on sale at 3.00; children between the ages of 6 and 12, $2.00; and toddlers five and under $1.00.

The usual overflow crowd of club senior members is expected to flock to the Outrigger on Christmas Day for the Annual Open House, held between 3 and 5 p.m.

Free pupu and refreshment—featuring Anzai's high potency "banzai"—will once again be the feature of the always gay club party.

Hula dancers and at least two musical troupes will provide the music for the yuletide wassailers.

Many have already made plans to stay for the club's Christmas Buffet Dinner. Marian Diamond's Hawaiian Group will provide music through the dinner hours.

New Year's Eve at the Outrigger, one of the great social events of the year, promises to be one of the island's best celebrations to usher in the brand new year.

The formal party gets underway at 7 p.m. with cocktails followed by a magnificent banquet at 8. A bottle of champagne will be provided each couple.

Both Marian Diamond Group and Randy Oness' Band will underscore the New Year's Party with their fine brand of music.

Manager Jake Tudor already has under lock and key a set of party favors that he assures the Forecast Staff will be the most unusual anywhere on the island.

A flood of early reservations has already been reported at the front desk. Tickets are going for a very reasonable $20 per couple.

So get those old dinner jackets out of mothballs. It's a yule season you won't forget!

Employee's Christmas Gift Donation

Dear Member:

Christmas will soon be here—and again as is our custom, we are asking our membership for a donation as an Annual Employees Christmas gift.

As the Outrigger Canoe Club does not allow tipping and gratuities and as there are many of the personnel who never have direct contact with our membership but who give service; such as the locker room employees, office help—in fact everyone, the Outrigger Canoe Club uses this method to insure that each has a Merry Christmas.

Please notify the Outrigger Canoe Club by letter before December 1, 1958, if you do NOT wish to have your account charged with this employees Christmas gift on your December statement.

If you wish to contribute more than the amount suggested please notify office.

VOLLEYBALL CLINIC JANUARY 5

A host of nationally known officials and coaches are headlines at the United States Volleyball Association Clinic to be held at the Hickam Air Force Base gymnasium on January 5.

The clinic will be opened to civilian and military volleyball players, officials and coaches throughout the islands.

Among the officials arriving here for the clinic are:

E. Douglas Boyden of Seattle, Washington: chairman of the Urban National Committee on Officials and Certification.

Roger D. Burton of Tulsa, Oklahoma: chairman of the Associations National Committee on Rules and Interpretation.

William T. Odeneal of Florida State University: coach of the 1957 and 1958 National Intercollegiate Volleyball Champions.

Island Officials aiding in the clinic are:

E. O. Degroot, Jr., Vance Kahalehau, and Jake Highland, all sanctioned USVBA Regional Officials.

Requirements for qualification as a USVBA Regional Official are as follows:

- Attend at least one USVBA Officials Clinic.

CAL SURFERS

What are these California surfers who took the Makaha surfing laurels like? For the answer the Forecast calls on The Sunday Advertiser's Robert Krauss:

There are two types of tourists who come to Hawaii for the winter season. 1. Those who have enough money to pay for their hotels. 2. California surfers.

You can always spot a California surfer when he gets off the plane at Honolulu International Airport by his bare feet, Bermuda shorts and T-Shirt.

If he carries a suitcase at all it will contain swim fins, face mask and a couple of bathing trunks. His only other item of luggage is a surfboard wrapped in a sleeping bag.

The first thing a California surfer does upon arrival is take a tour . . . of the used car lots in search of an old jalopy, preferably a panel type delivery truck.

This will be his hotel room.

As long as he's here, that is until his unemployment checks stop coming he will follow the surf from Sunset Beach to Makaha and back again like a water-logged gypsy.

Take Darrel Boucher, 22, of Long Beach, for example. His first investment was $75 for a 1947 Plymouth sedan. Next, he spent $4 on a used mattress at the Salvation Army.

By taking out the back seat and putting in an old piece of plywood, Boucher has rigged up a makeshift bed.

He cooks on the beach . . . oatmeal for breakfast, crackers for lunch, speared fish for dinner . . . and can live easily on $2 a day. His unemployment check is $39 a week.

Like many of the California surfers, Boucher has grown a goatee (blond) and a mustache. He wears Bermuda-length green bathing trunks with red and yellow stripes down the side.

If the surf is good, i.e., running up to 20 feet, he will spend up to eight hours in the water.

If it isn't, he'll go spear fishing or just lie around talking to other surfers. About the only appointment he never misses is a trip to the post office for his weekly check.

Waikiki hotel men, understandably, do not look forward to an invasion of California surfers whose stomachs are as large as their purses are small.

When they come to town they patronize the Waikiki Diner where you can get a five course meal for $1.29. Or the Sampan Inn for the 30-cent breakfast.

During the early migrations of California surfers the 72 ounce steak (free if you can eat it in 60 minutes) featured at M's Ranch House was popular. A champion surfer named Buzzy Trent polished it off in 40 minutes.

His friends, pint-sized Dewey Weber, finished within 50 minutes and asked for an extra helping of dessert.

Next time, after Trent put away the soup, salad, bread and butter, 72 ounces of steak, plus dessert and coffee, all within 18 minutes, the management declared him ineligible for future competition.

Not all of the California surfers are living off their unemployment checks. A few, like Byron Kough, Laguna Beach, are paying their own way. Kough will soon have his master's degree in physical education. He is a substitute teacher at Waipahu School.

He lives with five other surfers from California in a Sunset Beach house. They each pay $11 a month in rent and divide the food costs. Kough drives a 1947 Chevrolet sedan delivery wagon which he lived in when he first arrived.

Then there is Phil Edwards, Ocean-side, 20, who worked his way over as crewman on a yacht. He saved for a couple of years to make the trip and is living with Bud Brown, a photographer, who is here to take surfing movies.

And not all of the California surfers are men. Living for a month in the rear of a brown delivery truck are two girls, Marge Calhoun of Santa Monica and Eve Fletcher of Burbank.

They are spending their vacation in search of Hawaii's big surf, sleeping in the truck and eating in places like the Pokai Bay Tavern.

The girls go to bed early so they can get up at dawn to surf. At night they park on a beach with a good view and lock themselves in. They haven't been molested.

Why do they do it?

"The beach in California are too crowded," said Marge. "Sometimes there are 14 or 15 surfers trying to catch just one wave. Here, if you go out to Sunset during the week, you have it almost to yourself.

"Then, too, the surf there is bigger. It's like getting a ride on a locomotive. This is a complete new world and we want to learn how to handle it. Besides, it's cold in California now. Here it's warm.

COAST HAOLES—AUWE

Peter Cole and Marge Calhoun of California were crowned the men's and women's surfboard riding champions of the 1958 International Surfing Meet yesterday at Makaha Beach before an estimated 6,000 spectators.

Waves averaging from 12 to 15 feet gave the contestants ideal surfing conditions and competition in all divisions was exceptionally keen.

Cole succeeded Jammer Kekai as the men's senior champion. Kekai, who is stationed with the Army in Colorado, did not defend his title. Richard "Buffalo" Keaulana placed second and was followed by Rabbit Kekai, the 1955 champion.

Ricky Grigg of California was fourth and Bobby Krewson took fifth place.

Miss Calhoun, of Santa Monica, Calif., dethroned Vicki Heldreich as the women's champion after a close duel with Ethel Kukea, who held the titles in 1955 and 1956. It was the second year in a row that she finished as the runnerup.

Cynthia Hemmings took third place, Betty Heldreich was fourth and Keala Stibbard finished fifth.

In the men's junior championship event, Joseph Napoleon won out over Paul Strauch, Jr.. Fred Hemmings Jr. took third place, Don Stroud was fourth and Wayne Miyata finished in fifth place.

Rabbit Kekai, with Heidi Stevens of California as his rider, won the tandem acrobatic crown. Ernest (Mud) Werner was second. Third place went to Bobby Krewson and Kekaulani Kea.

Good surf held up throughout the day after fairly flat seas on Saturday. Waves began building up Saturday night while the Hale Au Au surfboard riders were putting on a night exhibition.

Semifinals of the men's events were held during the morning. Thirteen qualified for both the men's senior and junior championships.

Each rider was given up to an hour to catch as many waves as possible and the judges, headed by George Downing, had ample time to study and score each contestant.

Qualifiers for the men's senior finals, in addition to the five winners, were Ernest Werner, Lloyd Kellett, Joe Mehulu, Jerome Ling, Richard Kauo, Ken Carvalho and Conrad Canha.

Finalists for the men's junior event included Bobby Ah Choy, Paul Gebauer, Butch Hemmings, Gilly Halpern, David Maki, Jan Lee, Bobby Phipps and John Moore.

Vicki Heildreich, last year's women's champion, made the finals but failed to place among the top five. Also losing out in the final judging were Mozelle Angel, Anona Naone, Marjorie Phillips, Jane Kaopuiki and Joan Kalahiki.

The championships this year were sponsored by the Waikiki Surf Club. Presentation of trophies was made by Makaha Meet Queen Keaulani Kea. John Lind, president of the Waikiki Surf Club, paid tribute to the 25th Division for its cooperation and help in staging the meet held over the past two weekends.
