An Outrigger Guide to Steering Outrigger Canoes

By Marilyn Kali

If you've ever watched an outrigger canoe gliding gracefully through the water, you've probably marveled at the synchronization of the experienced crew, paddles dipping effortlessly into the water in unison.

On the other hand, if you've ever watched a canoe zigzag its way from point A to B, you've probably chuckled at the novice steersperson in the back of the boat.

The steersperson is the quarterback of every canoe, and as Outrigger begins competition this month in the Oahu Hawaiian Canoe Racing Association Regatta season, you'll have the opportunity to watch the Club's best, and its newest, and all types of steerspeople in between.

Board member Brant Ackerman, Coordinating Director for Athletics and Winged "0", has been steering Outrigger crews since he was 12-years old. He steered his first crew to a state title at the age of 13 and has won many state and Oahu championships since then. He is also a veteran of the Molokai-to-Oahu race, steering and paddling on 20 Molokai crews including the winning crews of 1975, 1977, 1983 and 1984 and more recently winning Masters crews.

"A good steersman can be the difference between winning and losing a race," Ackerman says. "The best steersmen are the people who know how to read the wind and swell. Usually people who surf make good steersmen because they are tuned in to both the wind and swell.

"You can know all the technicalities of steering, but not be a good quarterback, so it's important to a crew to find a steersman who is both.

"An effective steersman knows what to say, how to say it, when to say it and how often," Ackerman says. "If you're a chatterbox, no one will listen.

"You have to know what your crew is capable of and then call your moves judiciously. You can't yell 'Power 10' after every change."

Being a good steersperson, Brant says, involves three things:

- Technical Skills—Understanding the wind and swell, getting a good start, and knowing how to maneuver upwind, downwind and crosswind.
- Psychological Skills—Knowing how to motivate and get the best out of your crew.
- Analytical Skills—Figuring out before the race even begins, how you're going to execute the start, the straightaway, the turn, and the finish.

"The steersperson has to know how to position the canoe to compensate for all conditions," he adds.

The steersperson actually combines three different functions:

- Paddling or J Stroking—The

Learning the Terms

Just like any other specialty, steering has its own terminology:

UNE

Steer or turn from front of the canoe. Example: Seat number 1 unes (puts paddle in the water) and steers the nose of the canoe around the turn.

BACKWATER

Paddle in reverse.

WINDOFF

Stop paddling.

POKE

Placing blade fully in water to make a full correction.

HALF POKE

Placing blade half way down in water to make a minor correction.

steersman should ideally paddle at least half of the time. Otherwise, he/she is dead weight in the boat.

- Poking or Steering—Keep corrections small and frequent. Bigger corrections slow the boat down.
- Anticipating—Pay attention to what's happening in the race and be prepared to act. As above, small corrections are better than big corrections.

The way the steersperson places the blade in the water is critical to how well the canoe can stay on course.

"The steersperson should always keep his/her forearm flat on the gunnel when they are poking. This will give them better control and will secure the blade to the side of the boat," Brant said.

"The front of the blade should be angled toward the hull when you put it into the water. As you pull through on your stroke, the pressure of the water forces the blade toward the hull.

“The greater the angle, the greater the correction will be. The greater the depth, the greater the adjustment. When you make a small adjustment, you should go in shallow. A medium adjustment, put the blade in halfway, and a full adjustment, go in all the way and increase the angle,” he adds.

“However, the best way to steer, is to make small, frequent corrections. To do this, you have to have good anticipation. Make the correction before you need to, rather than after. This takes experience but if you work at it, you’ll learn.

“Most steerspersons feel the pressure from their crew to paddle, and they wind up paddling too much,” Brant said. “When the steersperson paddles too much, the canoe stands to lose more than it gains.”

Ackerman says that the steersperson shouldn’t ever let the boat veer more than 10 degrees off course without a correction. Always have a reference point or landmark to aim for.

Brant has taught many steering clinics at the Club and taught many novices.

“The best way to teach a new steersperson is to mount a motor on the back of a canoe. With the motor, you can go faster and the steersperson can feel the sensation of the blade in the water.

“They get the feel of the paddle biting and know what to expect. It’s a great way to teach turns, and you don’t burn out a crew.”

Making a Correction

The greater the angle of the blade, the greater the correction. However, the greater the angle, the more the boat will slow down. Keep corrections small and frequent. Make the correction half the distance you need to get back to center point. The boat will go the rest of the distance on momentum. As the boat hits the center point, stab on the opposite side to stop the momentum.

Getting the blade into correct position.

Initiating the correction.

Fortunately, kids learning to steer don’t have to make turns on the race course until they reach the Boys 16 or Girls 18 races, and most have had time to learn by then. For those who are trying to learn to turn, Brant has these tips for turning.

“Use the front tip of the ama, the buoy and your own eyesight as key points. During a race, the three points form a natural curve. As you get closer to the buoy, the three points will line up. When they’re all lined up, that’s when to start the turn. If you start too soon, you’ll be too low (close to the buoy), and if you start too late, you’ll be too high (far away),” Brant explains.

“You’ll also need to correct for the wind and ocean conditions, and the boat next to you.”

On the following pages, Brant has tips for Outrigger steerspersons, but reminds all paddlers that the first three strokes of a race are the most important. “A race can be won or lost on the first three strokes, and the steersperson should be paddling.”

Outrigger opens the season with the Clem Paiana Regatta at Keehi Lagoon on Sunday, June 5. For steerspersons, the true test will be the Kamehameha Day Regatta at Kailua Beach Park the following week, June 12.

“Kailua is the most difficult race for even the most experienced steerspersons because of the wind and ocean conditions, especially the cross angles and cross swells. That’s why it’s so important for all steerspersons to listen to the head coach before the race so they’ll know what to do.”

If you don’t know what to do with your Sundays, join the 200+ Outrigger paddlers at various beaches around the island during June. And don’t forget to join us on the 4th of July at the traditional Walter J. Macfarlane Regatta at Waikiki Beach. See you there! 🚣

Canoe Racing Strategies for Steerspersons

By Brant Ackerman

Flags

Before your race, count the lanes at both ends of the course to make sure the same color flag is at both ends. Do this about one or two races before yours, as the flag positions may change just before your race or the colors may change at one or both ends.

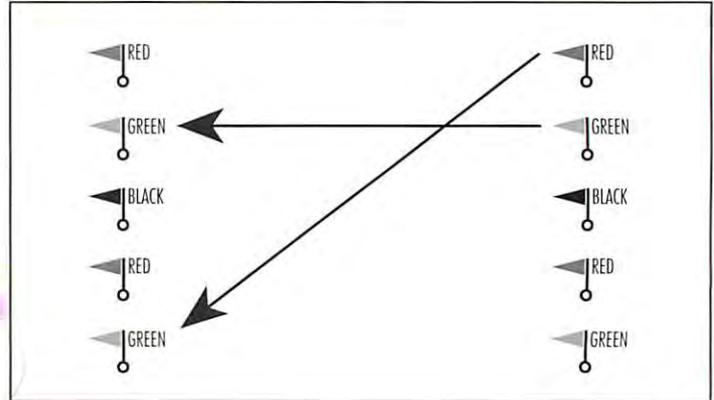

Not only should you know the color of your flag, but also the color of the flags on both sides of you. This is in case you should lose sight of your flag during the race or if your flag should break loose. This can and does happen. If it does, just go between the two flags.

Sometimes just the flag stem breaks and a small orange buoy is left. Other times the whole flag and buoy break lose. In either case, knowing the color of the flags on each side can keep you on course. If you have to make a turn, turn even with the other flags.

Adjacent Crews

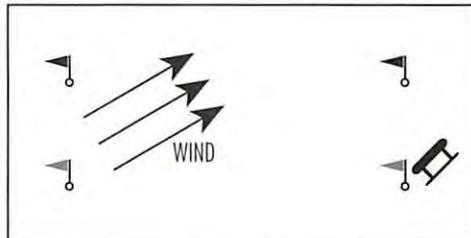

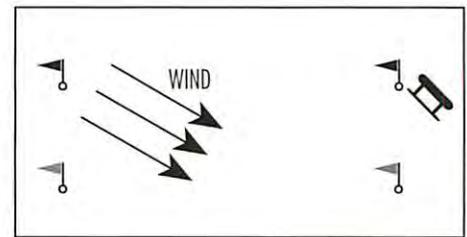

Find out what crews are next to you on each side and also the color of their boats. They can be of help if you lose sight of your flag by staying between them. However, do not depend solely on them, because they may not know where they are going.

Do not let them lead you off course either. This situation happens frequently when there are two lanes with the same color and the other canoe may be heading in the wrong direction.

Lining Up

When lining up for the start of the race, look at which way the wind is blowing. Face the bow of the canoe directly into the wind at the closest point to the flag. This will keep the canoe from drifting and will avoid having to turn the canoe around many times.

Use your stroke (Seat No. 1) as much as possible to keep the nose pointed into the wind. There is nothing worse than to be out of position at the start. Inform your stroke before you paddle out what the job includes.

Landmarks

When you are paddling out to your lane, paddle down to the center of your course and look both forward and backward. Try to find a landmark which is in line with your lane. If you lose sight of your flag during the race, you can locate your landmark which will keep you on course until you sight your flag again. A landmark can be any prominent feature such as a mountain, hill, tower, building, or just about anything that you can easily see.

If there is no landmark, only open ocean, it is helpful to find a cloud formation just above your flag. Since cloud formations change constantly during the race, when you see your flag just look up occasionally and find the cloud formation above. This formation will generally stay the same for a couple of minutes which is time enough to get a bearing until you can pick up your flag again.

Crew Instructions

Just before the start of a race there is so much confusion and excitement that it is vital for the crew to listen to you. Make this perfectly clear before the race. They should know that whatever you say goes. If you say paddle ahead, backwater, or wind off, they should do it instantly at your command and not just sit there. A split second can make a big difference.

The steersman should be the only person talking and everyone else should be listening. During the race, the crew should keep their eyes straight forward. The steersman should not yell just to yell, but should do constructive yelling. Emphasize such things as breathing, reaching and timing, etc.

When yelling at the crew, it is best to yell encouragement instead of insults. A boat will move much faster when the crew is "stoked".

For best results yell at each individual separately, either by name or seat number. That way the individual will listen to you when you speak directly to him/her. The best time to yell is right after a change. That way you are not going to interfere with the person calling the changes.

When approaching the finish line, if you are neck and neck with another boat and about 50 yards from the finish line, inform No. 2 "do not change." This can gain a few extra feet which can and has won many a race, especially short races.

The Start

This is the most important part of the race. After the previous race has ended, the official boat will raise a green flag meaning the race had no violations. A red flag means a violation has occurred and there may be a delay. There is five minutes before the start of the next race at which time a yellow flag will be raised during the five minute period.

Twenty seconds prior to the start, the yellow flag will start waving. The race can start anytime within the 20 second period. The starter will raise the red flag. Within 1-3 seconds the starter will drop the red flag and raise the green flag signaling the start.

You may hit or run over your starting flag but not the finish flag. Watch the starter for a few races (the more the better). The starter's starting habits are usually consistent and predictable. You can anticipate the starting procedure and be positioned to get a jump at the start.

Your entire crew must each know what is expected from their seat. Number one and two will help to keep the front of the canoe near your starting flag. Three and four will help move forward or reverse. Five will assist six with the stern positioning.

The entire crew must all be anticipating the start—not just the steersperson. Inform the crew of the starter's habits prior to going out on the course. It is critical for all six paddlers to hit the first stroke precisely together. It is the key difference between a good start and a great start.

Overlapping

A dangerous situation arises when another canoe crosses over into your lane. If that canoe hits you, it may get disqualified and you may just lose the race. Avoid a collision at any cost.

If you think your crew can speed up, try to steer away slightly and pick it up. If you can't pull away, slow the crew down and let the other canoe pass in front. You may lose a boat length, but if they hit you, you could lose 8 or 10 boat lengths.

You should constantly watch the other boats and try to see this situation coming before it happens so you can avoid it. Sometimes you can yell to their steersman, but do not count on him/her listening to you.

Turning

Making a good turn can gain your canoe two or three boat lengths on the other canoes. Every steersman has his/her own method for turning. Some like a close approach and a wide exit. Others like a wide approach and close exit, or still others a fairly wide approach and fairly wide exit.

Whichever method used, the most important thing is for the boat to slow down as little as possible.

When you are about 75 yards from the turn, inform No. 2 that you are approaching the turn. No. 2 is responsible for making sure that he/she is on the left side and No. 1 is on the right side going into the turn. This saves time and speed and No. 1 is already on the side he/she is going to "une" on.

The crew should pick it up before the turn to build up momentum, slow it down around the turn, applying the power and picking it up again coming out of the turn. It is best not to make a real tight turn because the boat will slow down too much, and it will overwork the crew.

As far as the flag goes, the shortest distance between two points is a straight line, so it is best to get as close to the flag as possible without hitting it. When turning around the flag, you must correct for the wind and current which can move you into or away from the flag, depending on which way you are heading.

You must make the necessary adjustments depending on how strong the wind and current are. If you are running with the current and wind, then a tight turn is possible, but if you are paddling against the wind, give extra room at the flag for the wind will blow you into your flag.

Overlapping on a Turn

For those of you who have to turn. If a canoe on your left is behind you, an overlap can occur at the turn. This can develop into a collision and possible disqualification, or a loss of boat lengths correcting to avoid them.

If a boat on your left is pretty far behind and if when you will be coming out of your turn they will be coming in, make your own turn a wide approach so as to come out close to your flag thus avoiding an overlap. ✓

Alex Anderson Celebrates 100th Birthday

By Barbara Del Piano

On a typical day, he rises around 8 a.m., has a hearty breakfast which includes grapefruit, oatmeal and coffee, then walks for about 45 minutes. If it's Tuesday, he's off to Rotary at the Royal Hawaiian. On Wednesday, he lunches at the Club with one of his three sons.

On other days, he has meetings to attend, places to go and things to do. He's cut down on his golf somewhat but still gets in a few holes now and then. Certainly, retirement has not put him out of circulation. What, you may ask, is so remarkable about this lifestyle? Certainly, a lot of senior citizens follow similar schedules. What makes this gentleman and the life he leads so special is that the man is R. Alexander Anderson and on June 6, he celebrates his 100th birthday.

Although Anderson has lived a full and rewarding life as an outstanding student, sportsman, war hero, refrigeration pioneer and business executive, he gained fame as the composer of some of Hawaii's best known and loved hapa-haole songs. "Lovely Hula Hands," "Princess Pupule" and "Red Opu" are just a few of the more than 100 songs he has written.

One particularly successful recording nationwide was of "Mele Kalikimaka," recorded by Bing Crosby and the Andrews Sisters, which sold more than a million records. It didn't hurt that "White Christmas" was on the other side, he laughingly admits.

Anderson said that he felt honored when he and Irving Berlin were introduced together on an early "Hawaii Calls" broadcast.

Bing Crosby became a close friend of Anderson, as did many other prominent people in the music industry. Jack Kapp, who founded Decca Records, was also a good friend and recorded many of Anderson's songs on his label.

The recording artists, in addition to Crosby, were some of Hawaii's best known musicians and entertainers such as Ray Kinney, Renny Brooks and Hilo Hattie. Alex's songs were featured on the original "Hawaii Calls." His songs were a big hit at the Kodak Hula Show when it first started in 1928 and they are still popular today.

Anderson frequently wrote songs for special occasions. One of his earliest compositions was the graduation song for his Punahou Class of 1912. He wrote many songs for his Alma Mater including one for the centennial pageant in 1941 and its 150th anniversary in 1991.

The official Outrigger Canoe Club song Anderson himself introduced at the Annual Meeting in 1981.

His famous "Cockeyed Mayor of Kaunakakai" was written as a favor to Paul Fagan who was entertaining Warner Baxter on Molokai. Anderson dashed off the song but was too busy to go to Molokai to sing it so the musicians at the party introduced it.

"And the first thing I knew, it was being played all over Waikiki. And then it went to the Mainland and Hilo Hattie took it up," Anderson relates. So what was intended as a gag song ended up as one of his biggest hits.

As a lad of 14, Anderson, who was just learning to surf, was one of that famous group of young boys rounded up on the beach at Waikiki by Alexander Hume Ford and enrolled as one of the first members of the Outrigger Canoe Club.

Alex married Margaret Leith Center in 1919. Peggy was the sister of "Dad" Center, another Outrigger legend who was an outstanding sportsman, instrumental in developing the Club's athletic programs.

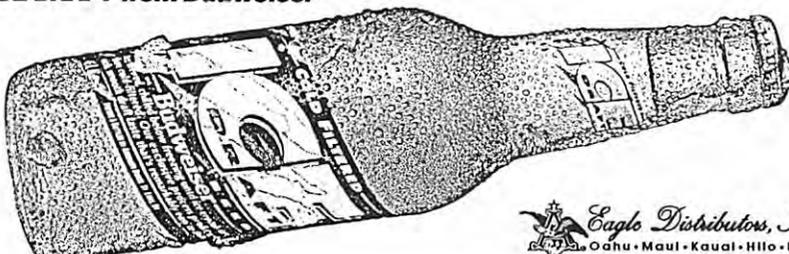

The Andersons became active members of the Outrigger and their four children, Robert Jr., David, Allen and Pamela all spent a great deal of their growing years at the Club.

The Anderson children have planned a very special birthday celebration for family and friends to celebrate his 100th Birthday.

Happy Birthday from all of us, Alex Anderson! 🍷

Employees of the Month

Lunch line cook Scott Yanaha and accounting clerk Evelyn Foronda Cagaoan have been selected as Employees of the Month.

Scott comes on duty at 7:30 a.m. and leaves at 2:30, on Tuesdays through Sundays. So to speak-seems like there is always more to do, but Scott says this is a "good place to work" and he has been at the Club for three years.

Since we have very likely eaten Scott's cooking at lunchtime, we are glad his future includes OCC.

Scott Yanaha, center, receives Employee of the Month award from President Walter Guild as General Manager Ray Ludwig looks on.

Local boy Scott graduated from Kaimuki High School and has worked at restaurant jobs in this area. He has always been a cook, and went through the Kapiolani Community College cooking program which he feels is good training.

In March, Scott went to Alaska for a vacation to visit his mother who has moved there. However, he says he "saved" his employee of the month award for the future.

Evelyn is our employee of the month for March. Actually her job "defies description" because when asked what she does, she replied "everything!" When the Controller and the other employees in the office were asked "What does Evelyn do?"

They responded, "everything that nobody else does, and she covers for everybody and she wears many hats."

Evelyn Foronda Cagaoan was Employee of Month in March.

In addition to her Everything in the Office OCC duties, Evelyn is also the office contact for the Outrigger Duke Kahanamoku Foundation, and learned a whole new computer language to handle the Foundation donations.

Evelyn has traveled three times on visits to the Philippines, and last year, decided to get married while on her trip, and surprised everybody at OCC. She has been here for eight years, and was the Employee of the Year in 1990.

Congratulations for Evelyn, our non-complaining, good worker, do everything employee of the month. ♪

Summer Time and the Steak Fry Is On

By Gerry DeBenedetti

Although you can't believe its summer already, it is, and time to kick back every Saturday night, and come to the OCC Steak Fry.

Steak Fry is a misnomer, because we also have chicken and fish, in addition to the NY steak and petit filet mignon. Vegetarians are not left out either, because the salad bar has both vegetable salad and pasta salad, and don't forget the big pot of beans and the two scoops rice. If you REALLY need an implement to push all that good stuff onto your fork, there are nice fresh rolls and (shhh) -butter.

There is plenty to eat. If you don't want an entree, you can just choose the salad bar. Sound good? It is.

What better way to enjoy your Club on these summer Saturday nights than to invite a guest, friend, someone who can appreciate our OCC sunsets, come down to the Hau Terrace, and broil your own dinner.

Dress is casual, bring your friends, find a table, watch the sunset, and enjoy your own cooking (without the cleanup).

If you really want to indulge, you can even order dessert from your server.

OCC is the only place I know where people applaud the sunset. It is such a special way to end the day. ♪

Surfing Committee Ready for Summer

By Terri Needels

The Surfing Committee, under the energetic leadership of Mark Jackola, has put together an exciting agenda of surfing activities to kick off the summer surf season at the Club.

As most of you are aware, the Outrigger Canoe Club was initially established to promote ocean sports such as surfing. With this mission in mind, the Surfing Committee is offering two activities to encourage members of all ages and experience levels an opportunity in which to participate and have fun together.

Summer Surf Contest

The Summer Surf Contest will be held any Saturday from June 4 through July 23, depending on surfing conditions. The holding period is designed to ensure that there will be good, clean waves breaking consistently at the surf spot directly in front of the Club (Old Man's).

Let's all hope for a repeat of last summer's surf contest conditions in which the participants compete in one of the best south swells of the summer.

All members of all abilities are encouraged to sign up on the sheets posted in the Boy's, Men's, Girl's and Women's locker rooms or at the Front Desk (or call Mark Jackola at 484-2030). The cost is only $10 which includes a T-shirt, refreshments and trophies for winners.

The awards will be presented at the annual Surf Movie night. Participants will be contacted the day before the contest takes place by phone, so be sure to list a phone number when you sign up.

Learn to Surf Clinics

Interested in learning how to surf or how to do some of those neat surfing maneuvers you've seen in the magazines? The Surfing Committee will sponsor a series of surfing clinics from 8:30 a.m. to Noon on June 13, 15 and 17. These clinics are free and are open to all members and their children, particularly Junior members.

Clinic participants will meet at the Club and will then go as a group to a Waikiki surf spot for the clinic. Experienced surfing instructors, both female and male, will run the clinic.

Sign up on the sheets at the Front Desk or call Mark Jackola, 484-2030.

Dining Room Survey Results

By Rick Davis, House Committee

Recently, we asked you what you thought of our Main Dining Room facilities. We received 391 responses, indicating a high level of interest among our members.

When asked what you liked least about the Dining Room, 28% mentioned the service. Management has taken note of this, and regular training for the wait personnel is already being intensified with mandatory, regular training sessions stressing back to basics.

Of interest is that only 7% of the responders complained about our smoking policy.

The majority of those commenting on lunch felt the menu is OK as is. Second on the list was a request for more salads.

The survey revealed the best liked thing about the Dining Room is the view. From there you complimented us on the food and its quality. Half as many as complained about the service, complimented us on the service. Training will continue.

When asked about dinner, 22% felt our menu is OK as is. Thirteen percent requested more ethnic food, 10% more pasta and 9% asked for more fish. Following closely behind were requests for healthy items.

The survey results are a good tool for management to use, especially when revising the menus. The Main Dining Room menu is currently being revamped with your input in mind. Stay tuned for more information and thank you for participating in the survey. ♪
