Summer Paddleboard Race

By Joe Tiepel

Nature and God cooperated in sending forth the largest South swell in at least a year to make for one of the most exciting and spectacular paddleboard races ever held.

The Club once again hosted the annual Summer Paddleboard Surf Race and a genuine surf spectacular it was, through rather strong and consistent 5-8 foot waves, compliments of a low-pressure storm south of New Zealand.

Last year, this so-called surf race unfortunately fell victim to the smallest summer swell period of the past three decades. Contestants then had only the most minor assistance from a few ripples, as they were able to glean them from inside Old Man's coral head garden.

This year saw an event at the opposite end of the wave spectrum. In fact, the challenge was so great that three men were forced to drop out due to injuries and other causes. One of the highlights of this two-mile "gutsball" paddleboard sprint occurred on the way out Old Man's channel when it closed out on the main pack of contestants. Ooohs and aaahs from the cheering beach throng resounded as bodies and paddleboards, up to 14-feet long, crashed hither, thither. It paid off in more ways than one to be ahead of the pack, as winner Bret Goodfriend and a few others will attest—they barely scratched up and over that famous channel closeout to safe water on the other side.

Twenty-two men and women began this paddleboard race. When the white-water settled, 19 men, led once again by the seemingly invincible Bret Goodfriend, and both women, Colleen Kelly and Melissa Wheelless, had completed the event. Each division winner, Bret and Colleen, were awarded trophies and a Scott Bodyboard.

Meanwhile Outrigger members Steve Scott and Mike Fox and yours truly were out on Oahu's Southeast shore subjecting numerous other salty sea stalwarts to the bonecrushing menace of 5-8 foot Sandy Beach. The spills, thrills and punishment were for the 1982 Scott Bodyboard Championships, and more Bodyboards were awarded there thanks to Mr. Scott.

A special thanks goes to the Club for hosting this event, including ample refreshments, and to Cline Mann, race director, and his assistants, Wayne Faulkner, Aggie Quigg and Baby Cross.

A special acknowledgement is extended to a few standouts who haven't participated regularly in paddleboard racing recently and yet did very well—Fred Hemmings, Jr., avid runner and canoe-steersman extraordinaire; Dale Hope, usually the race director, and Donny Mailer, all-around waterman.

Here are complete race results:

On the Cover

Wonder who all those people are on the cover and why they're dressed so outlandishly? Well, we haven't room to list their names (though many of you may recognize yourselves and your friends) but the occasion was a Paddlers' Ball, a whimsy dreamed up by paddlers Laura Sanburn and Tina McKeller and attended by some 250 of their peers. As the invitation specified that attire should be Formal Swimwear, guests complied, as seen on the cover. Tune in next month for all the full story and more pictures.

Outrigger's Outstanding Amateurs

By Joan Kaaua

On a balmy July evening, the Hau Terrace was filled with members who came to view our first Amateur Talent Contest, one we hope will become an annual event.

Fifteen-year-old Pumehana Davis opened the program with a medley of songs played beautifully on her harp. She was followed by several surprising acts, including the sassy duo of Tiare (Loose as a Goose) Finney and Susie (Watch Me Wiggle) Johnson. Their performance to the music of Spike Jones earned them third place in their category.

An unusual treat was our singing troubadour, Senor Cornelius Mulder. Called back for an encore by master of ceremonies, Ron (I Know Talent When I See It) Sorrell, Herr Mulder reappeared in a German costume to sing several more songs.

Using our beach setting, Rod Muller, who won the Non-Musical category, defied the laws of nature, and some pretty high flames, to entertain us with an unusual fire dance. Thanks to Rod's understanding of things Samoan, it wasn't necessary to call the fire department.

Paul "Bossey" Dolan played some catchy tunes on his portable keyboard, and Bob Fischer tinkled the ivories, showing that you can learn to do something if you really want to. Melissa Wheelless sang, accompanied by Jere Chellin, and we hope we'll be privileged to hear her wonderful voice more often. And when Mike Buck came on stage to sing some old-time Hawaiian favorites, several of us in the audience were tempted to get up and join him with a hula.

Winner of the music category, Angus Cooke sang an original song and Angus Cooke won 1st in the musical category.

Pumehana Davis was 3rd in the Musical group.

then played J.S. Bach on his cello. The Gremmies presented a skit about "older" members, and Hunter Eggers and Heath Hemmings brought down the house with their "popping" contest. The Kimo Four, led by Jimmie Stackhouse, sang in true Barbershop Quartet fashion and Rock & Roller Mike Wood, assisted by Angus Cooke, sang selections from the Elvis era.

It was a great evening, and members are already planning on entering next year. Perhaps then, Cline Mann will hear someone sing "Temptation." All right, Cliner?

Hawaiian music was Mike Buck's contribution to the talent show.

Rod Muller's fire dance won him top honors in the non-musical category.

Paul Dolan won honorable mention for his playing and singing.

Our thanks to Jeff Dolan for his idea for the contest and for his hard work in making the evening a success.

The winners were as follows:

Musical Category	Non-Musical Category
1. Angus Cooke	1. Rod Muller
2. Mike Buck	2. The Gremmies
3. Pumehana Davis	3. Tiare & Susie "Ulu Ulu"

Comings & Goings: Rosemary Chew Townsend, Master's Women paddler, will be commuting from San Francisco to Honolulu instead of vice versa. She and husband Mike finally will be sharing the same house key in their new Sausalito abode. Son Timmy is taking a year off from Punahou to attend Katherine Branson/Mt. Tamalpais School in Marin County...Jim, Jane, Lani and Lisa Jones are off to Sao Paulo, Brazil, where Jim will be starting large marine shrimp farms. They expect to be there for several years and say the front door is always open for OCC paddling buddies...

When the winds are blowing strong there's a lot of windsurfing activity out Kahala Beach way. Among 'Riggers seen out there with their boards are Dale Hope, Mike Holmes, Jack Feher, Keone and Leayne Downing, Bert Gordan, Paula Carbone, Herb Hill, Clay Sutherland, Kala Judd, Rod Muller, Mary Franco, Muffer Scully, Kimo Austin and Aggie and Joe Quigg. And speaking of windsurfers, Paul Lambert, Men's Novice paddler, and brother Ed have come out with a super new wax for boards and paddles. Called Buzz Wax, it's made of pure beeswax and has a high melting point so it will last a long time. Ask for it at your local surf shop...

Help Wanted: Haunani Ackerman, chairman of Bishop Museum's Festival '82, has a long list of help-wanted spots open. Already pressed into service are Marilyn Haine, Arden Moore, Leslie Mattice, Gerri Pedesky and Julie Franko, to name a few. This year's festival will be October 24, and it's a super fun day for all the family, so mark it on your calendar...

Gil and Marty Moss send greetings from Hana, Maui, where Gil is general manager of Hotel Hana-Maui, and promise a special welcome to 'Riggers who visit them...

Carole Wilbur wore Outrigger colors when she ran the Hilo Marathon in 3:29:04 to place 2nd in her age group (30-39). She also was 5th woman overall. Carole says she conditioned by keeping up with her husband John...

Nonresident member Betty McGill pens from Rancho Bernardo, California, that one of her oil paintings was exhibited at the San Diego Art Institute. It had been shown previously at the Honolulu Academy of Arts...Michael Buck, guru of weight loss, reports he has now lost 166 pounds with 30 or so to go! Mike says he'll be glad to explain how he did it to anyone who is interested in his weight-loss program. Nice going, Mike!...

Infant Items: Tom and Lesline Connor's Vaimana, which means Water Spirit, weighed in at 10½ pounds. Tom says to look for him in the #4 seat a few years hence...Billie and Bill Baird joined the ranks of grandparents when daughter Keri and husband Mike Fer- nandez greeted baby son Dane... What's in a name? Malia Snyder, daughter of Sid and Diane Snyder, has a new one—Kananialoe—given to her by the Rev. Abraham Akaka at her baptism last month.

From our "non-birdwatching" department: Waikiki Aquarium director Leighton Taylor, was seen on the Big Island this past summer with other scientists on a special "fishwatching" expedition...

It's heartwarming to know that even big stars can be so thoughtful. One of the Outrigger's most visible members, Tom Selleck, cabled from Europe this summer, while on location for his new movie, to wish good luck and congratulations to the Club's volleyball squads with which he participates when he's here for Magnum filming...And another new face to watch for—pro surfer and pro model, Buzzy Kerbox, has signed a long-term contract with Polo Ralph Lauren Clothing...

Hungry anybody? Something new on the Terrace is the selection of pupus being served from 3 to 7 p.m. every day except Mondays. Choose from a cheese tray, nachos, assorted hot pupus and two varieties of super-popular potato shells—and the price is right... Aerobic dancing may have done wonders for his cardiovascular system, but Ernie White has two broken fingers to prove that the popular exercise system works only if you stay on your feet. Ernie didn't...

A belated mahalo to Peter Balding for loaning us his beautiful Hawaiian quilt so that we could photograph it for July's Outrigger cover. The kapa, made for Peter by Joan Ka au'a, is named E mau ka ho'omana'o 'ana na la I 'au'i a'e, which means "Keep the memories of days long past." The design of the quilt features three canoes representing Johnny Hollinger, Dad Center and Duke Kahanamoku, OCC paddling greats of yesteryear.

1982 "Maunakea 200"

By Steve Quinn

The team of Doss Tannehill (Motorcycle Committee chairman), Jack "JB" Beaumont and Brant Ackerman placed third in a field that included world-class competition at the 1982 "Maunakea 200" enduro motorcycle race on the Big Island this past Memorial Day weekend. Brant Ackerman earned additional honors by finishing fifth in his class, no small feat considering he rode most of his second day with a cracked collarbone. Other OCC riders were Mark Buck, Robbie Bright and Steve Quinn.

This year's annual two-day event started seven miles above Hilo on the Saddle Road. It was sponsored by the "Rock Island Riders" of the Big Island, and attracted such known riders as the Malcolm Smith Husqvarne racing team from Riverside, California.

The race began on the pavement, but immediately progressed to "off road" riding across lava flows, through dense tropical Hilo forests, over cane-field roads, slushy trails, miles of rough dirt road with very deep puddles, and finally endless miles of a'a lava. The riders who didn't break down covered 113 miles and ended up at the Pohakuloa Ranger Cabins for the night. Some of the "puddles" referred to were more like small lakes, frequently spelling disaster for even the best riders who happened to pick the wrong line in attempting these amphibious crossings. Many wound up completely submerged and had to pump water out of their engines to get them started again.

At the end of a grueling first day, aching riders tossed fittfully in their bunks, dreaming about avoiding imaginary boulders and cliffs, trying to rest, but too exhausted to really sleep. The second day, covering 123 miles, started at the Ranger Cabins, then crossed Parker Ranch pastureland to Waimea town. From the Maunakea slopes just past Waimea, the course proceeded mauka up and around the backside of Maunakea to the 12,000-foot elevation. Much of the course passed through low clouds. These combined with drizzling rain reduced visibility in some instances to as little as 30 feet or so. Around the backside, bikes churned up loose lava and the moisture in the air caused steam to rise as if the lava were cooling from a recent flow. The second day included all sorts of volcanic terrain and spectacular sights before riders emerged from the isolated side of Maunakea.

Bikes were packed in vans and shipped by Young Brothers barge about one week before the race. Riders went over the day before the race and stayed in Kona for the remainder of the Memorial Day weekend before returning to Oahu. Joining the OCC group were Duncan Brown and his wife, Marilyn, from Phoenix. Duncan prepped with OCC the day before, rode well until he gashed his elbow midway through the first day, and joined us in the celebrations afterwards, along with other riding pals from Oahu.

Mark Buck was unanimously selected to receive the "Directional Iggy" award (nothing personal Jon) for mistaking Mauna Loa for Maunakea, and ending the first day with a flat tire and out of gas. Beaumont and Ackerman deserve credit for finding and rescuing Buck, who luckily found a phone at the Moana Loa Observatory and sent a distress call to his teammates across the Saddle at the cabins on Maunakea. Starting at about 4 p.m., after just completing the first day's ride, Beaumont and Ackerman borrowed a truck and drove to the observatory. High altitude prolonged this mercy mission because scarce oxygen in the air prevented the truck from going more than about 5 miles per hour as they neared the observatory.

One of the Club's more experienced racers, Robbie Bright, was doing great until he pushed too hard on the throttle and seized his engine on the paved roads just a few miles from the finish on the first day.

"Stinky" Quinn, the same who "crashed on the way to the start" in the Opaulea Invitational, and also the recipient of the perpetual Yick-Lung "Most Likely To Suck-Seed" award for his performance in the Opae Invite, surprised some by his entry in the Maunakea 200. Fellow rider Mike Muller commented just days before the scheduled departure for Hilo, but too late for Quinn to cancel, "You must be crazy! Either that, or you've greatly improved." Slightly shook, Quinn went anyway. After the first day's riding, he was so exhausted that he threatened not to ride day two. However, motivated by the long list of nonfinishers and greatly inspired by Buck's determination to fix his flat tire even if it meant borrowing a rim, Quinn got a second wind and completed the race.

Both Ackerman and Quinn came away lame from crashes on the second day; Ackerman with a cracked collarbone, and Quinn with a shoulder-muscle tear. Bright, the only other casualty, was injured slightly, but as a result of recreational activity, not

Tannehill, who never finished in his previous tries, and always experienced some difficulty getting going in the past, had some good news and some bad news this year. The bad news was that when Doss pulled up to the starting line his bike wouldn't start. But, in his customary cool-head fashion, Doss simply pulled his bike aside, gave it a swift kick, got back on, started it, and got under way slightly behind from the start. The good news was the he finished the race this year with a Third-Place Team finish. Amazing how a little maturing influence from Punahou guys mellow out those Kam School boys.

As chairman of the committee and de facto captain of the OCC teams, Doss and his lovely wife, Scrappy, assisted with hotel accommodations and helpful hints on bike preparation and how to prevent flats during the race. All of the OCC participants greatly appreciate the Club support in making this year's "Maunakea 200" a fun success. And a special note of thanks to Douggie Carr on the Big Island for taking care of the vans and getting them loaded and unloaded for us.

Super Swimmers

Four members of the Outrigger Canoe Club were among the participants in the National Masters Swim Meet in Woodlands, Texas, in May—a meet that brought out more than 900 swimmers from the United States, England, France, West Germany, Australia and South America.

Masters Swimming competition starts at age 25, and for the first time since the inception of this program in 1971, there are competitors in the 90-and-over age group.

OCC's Joan Osborne set four national records for her age group, as well as placing first in six events.

Summer Fun

By Adrian W. Rosehill

The Outrigger Junior Athletic Summer Program for 1982 got off to its annual start on June 13 with 25 kids of various ages participating—a drop in attendance from the normal number of 50 to 60 participants. The smaller size of the group, however, enabled co-leaders Adrian Rosehill and Didi Guild to work more closely with each individual.

The program encompassed a variety of activities, including canoeing, surfing, boogie boarding, bodysurfing, and various events on the volleyball courts and in Kapiolani Park. In addition, weekly excursions to places such as Waimea Bay, Castle Park, roller-skating at Skateland, and hiking in Diamond Head served to round out the activities offered.

The program concluded with an awards party which recognized those individuals who excelled in various sports and featured the presentation of certificates of accomplishment to all who participated. Top honors went to Robin Johnston, who received the "outstanding athlete" award plus trophies for surfing and boogie boarding. Lani Jones received the girls' boogie boarding award, with Michael Corboy receiving the trophy for the boys' bodysurfing.

Special thanks is extended to Club manager Ray Ludwig, Club captain, Linc Scafe, and all the ladies in the front office whose assistance added greatly to the effectiveness of the JASP.

Kickoff Time

It's that time again! Monday-night football time, that is. The Club's Monday-night football-watching sessions begins on September 13 and will continue through the football season from 6 to 8:30 in the Bar Lanai. Beverages are served, plus hot carved roast beef, ham or turkey sandwiches for those who want to stay on and start their Tuesday-morning quarterbacking early.

Memory Workshop

If you have trouble remembering names and faces, plan to attend the special memory workshop being offered at the Club on Monday, September 20th.

The program is presented by Bill Clennan, a young Canadian who has spoken to approximately 400 meetings a year since 1969. One of the most popular of his workshop programs is the one entitled "Remember Names & Faces." It teaches participants techniques for remembering first names, last names and the names of people in groups. So if you're one of those who says, as so many of us do, "Your face is familiar but I can't recall your name," this workshop is for you.

The session, which usually costs $190, is being offered to O.C.C. members for only $25. It will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Main Dining Room. Size is limited so sign up early at the front desk.
