

Surfer Five Don't Like to Buy Ducats; May Change Name

The Outrigger Club's basketball players object, so say some of them to playing a whole season and losing not one game, and then having to buy their own tickets to witness the series of games that will be played here by the Los Angeles Blues and local teams.

Accordingly, several members of the team are talking seriously of the team not appearing under the name of the Outrigger Canoe Club at the final game of the Blues' series here, but instead playing under some other name.

The canoe club, so it is announced, has declined to furnish season tickets for the team which won the championship in basketball this season, and accordingly the members of the team who want to see the series will have to dig down in the trousers pocket for cash to buy the red, blue, yellow and brown slips that entitle one to a seat.