

WHITAKER AGAIN

Tom Whitaker, coach of the Olympic club swimming team which participated in the Outrigger Canoe club's meet at Punahou tank Monday and Tuesday evening, believes that swimming in Hawaii is safe in the hands of the younger stars who are just beginning to come to the front.

He was especially enthusiastic in his praise of Ed and Clarence Crabbe who won several events during the meet and also played a prominent part in the water polo games.

"These two boys show lots of promise," Whitaker said. "If they work hard during the next few months they will be in a position to challenge any of the swimmers who come over here to take part in the national championships in August. They did fine work throughout the Outrigger meet."

"I thought the folks down here were not enthusiastic over water polo," he added. "But I have not seen a crowd get as excited in years as the folks who were at the meet Tuesday night. Our crowds on the mainland seem to have lost all of their pep. I wish we could get a crowd up there to show as much enthusiasm as was exhibited at the Outrigger meet."
