This organization, which endeavors to give a clear conception of all rules and thrash out doubtful decisions as well as fluke plays, may in time develop into a soccer school.

All managers, coaches and players interested are cordially invited to attend meetings of this organization on the first and third Wednesdays of each month. In fact, a committee has been named to get at least two members of other soccer teams to attend the meetings of this club.

Thomas C. B. Gibson, well-known soccer official, was named president of the club, which is the first of its kind hereabouts. George Low, last year's manager of the Celtics, was elected vice president and William Martin, secretary.

More than 15 officials, including the following, were present: Samuel Todd, Robert Anderson, E. A. Creevy, "Doc" S. Klauss, George Low, George McKinley, Billy Martin, T. C. B. Gibson, Alec Rattray, Carl Bonnelycke and James Wink.
