THE DOTTED LINES: Yes, it does seem as if everyone has been talking about the weather for the past couple of unusually muggy days. Even Tom Selleck, who on the day before he went back to shooting "Magnum" played two volleyball games at the beach and found it "the hottest I've ever been in Hawaii" . . . Tom spent the summer not making a movie for the first time since "Magnum" began. "I had several good offers," he said. "I was offered a role in 'Silverado,' which would have been great because I love westerns. But there was a conflict with the end of the 'Magnum' season last year . . . If you've been out of work as much as I have in this business, it's not easy to say no to a job. But I needed some time for myself and my family." Stepson Kevin, for instance, spent the summer with Tom and attended summer school here and some of Tom's softball games with the Outrigger Canoe Club in the Waikiki Bar and Restaurant League . . . Tom did, however, spend part of the summer "trying to get a picture together for next year" and there are "five or six" possibilities . . . Any back-to-work blues? Not at "Magnum," Tom said. "The crew really is family here. I missed them and I'm glad to be back, even though it's hard physical work. I get tired of doing the show, but I don't get tired of the show — there's a big difference. I like the show, it's still a challenge" □ □ □

Lahaina and Kihei keying for Molokai Channel challenge

By LOU ZITNIK
Sports Writer

WAILUKU — When experts rate chess moves, they place an exclamation point after an excellent move, and a question mark after a move that could be either good or bad.

One month into Maui's long distance canoe racing season, a question mark and an exclamation point have taken up positions behind two Maui crews of opposite gender.

The exclamation point has zipped into place behind the Lahaina women's crew. The question mark has taken up a resting place in the waters off Kihei, eying the efforts of Kihei men's crew.

Lahaina's women started wooing the exclamation point earlier this year at the state regatta championships, when the women paddled to a convincing win in the junior women's race.

"It was a great win for us, a real confidence builder," Ann Perry, Lahaina's steerswoman said after the race. "The women from Outrigger couldn't believe that we beat them."

But beat them they did, and one week later, the Lahaina women followed the championship paddle with a solid victory at the Queen Kaahumanu distance race off Kahului. Last Saturday they added a win at the Kauko distance race (Maui to Lanai) to their string of victories.

The three victories, plus a July 21 win at the John Kukahiko distance race, prompted Lahaina coach Glenn Perry to rate his women's chances at this year's Molokai channel race as very high.

"We're really high on the women," Perry said. "We're optimistic that they'll have a good showing at Molokai."

The race from Molokai to Oahu is the high point of the season for men and women distance paddlers. For this year's race, crews are expected from Canada, Tahiti and the mainland. No Maui crew has ever won the race from Molokai to Oahu.

To prepare for the event, which will be held Sept. 22 for the women (Na Wahine O Ke Kai), and Oct. 13 for the men (Molokai Hoe), Perry is training his crew four days a week, totaling 30 to 40 miles of paddling a week. To add polish to the women's style, Mark Buck, a veteran Outrigger Canoe Club coach, flies in from Oahu once a week.

"Once a week may not sound like much," Perry said, "but Buck's contribution has been significant." According to Perry, another significant factor in Lahaina's success has been the number of women turning out for practice.

"We've got about 18 women working for the 12 seats (six starting paddlers, plus six relief paddlers); that's one of the reasons why we're so high on our chances in the Molokai race," Perry said. "The west side has always had strong women's crews, but there hasn't ever been the depth like we have this year. There's a lot of competition for those seats."

One seat that will definitely add a sharp edge to Lahaina's chances in the channel race is seat number six, or the steerswoman's seat. Ann Perry brings winning experience to that position. While paddling for Outrigger Canoe Club, Perry steered her crew to three wins in three tries at the channel.

"I'm excited about the race," Ann Perry said. "I just feel that we're going to do really well. I don't want to make any prediction, because anything can happen in the Molokai race, but we've got some strong women on this crew. And from what I've seen, I think they're good enough to do very well against the Oahu women."

Some of Lahaina's top prospects are Toni Kahan, Vanessa Lerry, Laura Blears-Cody, Carol Areola, Mary Yates, Celine O'Grady-Warfield, Candy Horton, and Shelly Basta.

The women will get a chance to see how they rate against Oahu's distance crews when they travel to Oahu Saturday for the 26-mile Dacenter race from Kailua to Honolulu.

"It's one of the toughest races besides the Molokai," the steerswoman Perry said. "Most of the strong crews from Oahu are there, and if we can do well, it'll give us a mental edge going into the channel race."

After the Dacenter race, Lahaina will travel to Hawaii on Sept. 1 for the Queen Liliuokalani distance race, where the Tahitian crews usually make an appearance. Then it's three weeks to Molokai and a chance to chip the exclamation point in granite.

While Lahaina has scheduled two off-island races to train for the Molokai crossing, Kihei Canoe Club's distance crew has battened down the hatches and is getting ready for the crossing by doing all its racing on Maui. Their next race is Saturday: the Maui to Molokai race. And their final race before the crossing will be the circle Molokini race, Sept. 21.

Kihei, by virtue of its first place finish in the Lanai to Maui race, second place (first from Maui) in the Great Kahakuloa, and third place (first from Maui) in the Maalaea distance race, has to be rated as Maui's top prospect in the Molokai race. But unlike Lahaina, there is a big question mark attached to Kihei's

Although the south side club has dominated its Maui competitors, they have been unable to score a win against off-island competition. Molokai and Hoopili beat them at the Maalaea; Molokai beat them at the Kahana Invitational; and Kai Opua beat them at the Great Kahakuloa.

"We're not looking at what Molokai is doing, we're just trying to do the best we can," said Kihei coach Mike Gerry. "Last year we said we wanted to place in the top 15, and we placed fifteenth. This year our goal is to place in the top 10."

Like Lahaina, Kihei will be aided in its top-10 effort by a solid base of paddlers. Gerry says that 20 paddlers are working out for the nine seats (six starters, three relief paddlers) on the Molokai crew.

Mike Cordi; and we have a solid base of veterans, like Bill Monahan, Jack Williams, and Sarge McBride. It's going to be a good crew; how good, we won't know until after the race."

Like Lahaina, Gerry will wait until a few days before the race to make the cut down to nine paddlers.

Said Gerry, "By keeping all 20 paddlers in training, everyone knows that they have to work for their seats. Most of these guys have competed in athletics before, so they know what to expect when it comes down to the cut."

"Besides, keeping the practice open to 20 men means that more people get to enjoy paddling. That's what we're trying to prove — that paddling is a fun way to stay in shape. We want to get as many people as possible involved in the sport, not just win."

A finish in the top 10 at the channel race would go a long way towards helping spark interest in long distance paddling on Maui; it would also go a long way towards erasing a question mark.

Pro volleyball returns to sand this weekend

The Hawaiian Open professional beach volleyball tournament returns to the Hilton Hawaiian Village courts this weekend.

Also returning are defending champions Sinjin Smith and Randy Stoklos. The tournament's total purse is $20,000, with $7,000 going to the winning team.

Competition begins at 9 a.m. both Saturday and Sunday. The final is scheduled for approximately 3 p.m. Sunday. There is no admission charge.

The Hawaii tournament, in its second year, is the 12th stop in the 15-stop national pro beach volleyball series. The series plays in eight states and offers more than $235,000.

The only team to win more than two tournaments this season is John Hanley and Jon Stevenson. Hanley was an All-America for the University of Hawaii in 1983.

Hawaii's Jon and Jay Anderson are expected to compete.

Rarick golf set for Maui

The Aloha Section's Murray Rarick Memorial Match Play Championship will be held at the Kapalua Bay Golf Course on Maui Sept. 15-18. It has a purse of $10,000.

In addition to prize money, the champion will receive an exempt spot in the Isuzu Kapua International.

The qualifying round will be played Sunday, Sept. 15, at 7:30 a.m. and the first round will follow at 1 p.m. The quarterfinals will be held Sept. 16 from 8 a.m., the 36-hole semifinals Sept. 17, and the 36-hole final Sept. 18. Tee times are at 8 a.m. each day for the 36-hole matches.

Defending champion is John Inzer of Hawaii Kai Golf Courses.

Ron Rarick and Professional Golf Supply Co. of Hawaii, the tournament sponsor, will hold a cocktail party Sept. 15 at Kapalua Hotel following the first round.

Kapalua purse is $10,000

The 1985 Kapalua Open tennis tournament will offer $10,000 in cash and prizes. The tournament, held at the Kapa-

lua Tennis Garden, runs from Aug. 31 to Sept. 2.

Committed to the tournament are defending champions George Lee (men's singles), Rosie Vera Cruz Bareis (women's singles), Peter Braun and Stu Saiki (men's doubles) and Bareis and Rose Thomas (women's doubles).

Entry deadline for the tournament, which includes competition in "B" division, is Tuesday.

For information, call 669-5677 on Maui.

Caldwell gets an 8th

Pat Caldwell of Hawaii Kai finished eighth in the 18- to 24-year-old age group of the ninth World Bodysurfing Championships held this past weekend in Oceanside, Calif.

Bob Thomas, a firefighter at Hawaii Kai Fire Station, finished 14th in the 25-34 age group.

The event was held in three-to-five-foot surf at Municipal Pier. There were approximately 375 contestants from the United States, Australia, New Zealand and Mexico.

HPC offers tickets

Season tickets for Hawaii Pacific women's volleyball are on sale at the college. Cost is $45, which is good for admission to all 14 HPC regular-season matches.

The tickets will not be honored at the district playoffs.

Individual match tickets will cost $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for children 12 and under. HPC students will be admitted free with ID.

The Sea Warriors open their season against Westmont College on Friday, Aug. 30. Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Kawaiahaeo Gym.

Selleck in benefit match

Tom Selleck, star of the television series, "Magnum P.I.," will play in a benefit volleyball match against a University of Hawaii Wahine alumnae team.

The match is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 3 at Klum Gym.

Islefile

Army Women's Golf

Kristli Caldeira shot a 3-over-par 76 to take the lead going into today's final round of the U.S. Army Hawaii Women's Golf Invitational at Leilehua Golf Course.

Leslie Nishimura's 80 was good enough for second place after the first round, held at Kalakaua Golf Course. Other leaders, flights A through G, respectively: Carol Commedford, Nancy Hong, Bessie Iwamoto, Florence Miyasaki, Grace Fukunaga, Pat Santos and Val Mortensen.

USO Golf Tournament

The team of Larry Chun, Donn Yoder, H. Ikeda and Everett Kishimoto won an 18-hole USO charity golf tournament Wednesday at Kaneohe Klipper Course.

The quartet posted a stableford 74. Under the format, the two best balls are used on each hole and points are awarded for pars, birdies, etc., based on net scores.

The Cutter Ford-sponsored team of Ron Bland, David Outright, Mark Crossley and Robert Jacobs also recorded a 74. The winner was determined on a match of the scorecards. In third place was the H&W Food team comprised of Herbert Souza, Guy Isobe, Gene Lum and Merle Kelikela.

Keiki Fun Run Winner

Kelle Powell, 13, of Edmonds, Wash., paced a field of more than 500 youngsters to take top honors in the recent American Cancer Society-sponsored Keiki Fun Run around Ala Moana Center.

Powell's winning time in the three-kilometer run was 10 minutes and 24 seconds. Missy Mowat of Hawaii Kai finished second in 10:38.

Participants who collected pledges from friends and relatives for each kilometer run to help support the Honolulu Unit of the American Cancer Society were entered in a drawing for a free trip for two to Disneyland. The winner was Tricia Takatsuki, 7, of Waipahu.

Hawaiian Volleyball

World class two-man teams hit the sand at the Hilton Hawaiian Village court this weekend when the pro beach volleyball circuit stops here with the $20,000 Miller High Life Hawaiian Open.

Top-seeded teams include defending champions Sinjin Smith and Randy Stoklos; defending World Champions Andy Fishburn and Jay Hanseth; former University of Hawaii standout John Hanley and Jon Stevenson; Tim Hovland and Mike Dodd; and Hawaii's Jon Anderson and Jay Anderson.

Matches begin at 9 a.m. tomorrow and Sunday and continue until about 6 p.m. both days. Sunday's finals are scheduled for 3 p.m. Admission is free.

Outrigger to California
