The Family of the Late Auntie Eva Pomroy

wishes to thank Reverend Akaka, Peter Balding, President of Outrigger Canoe Club, Board of Directors, Ray Ludwig, General Manager of Outrigger Canoe Club, all members young & old, Streamboat & all the beachboys, all the doctors & nurses & staff of Queen's Hospital Puahi 6, & to all her dear relatives and friends for their many kindness shown.

New club owners hope that fate is on their side

It would appear April is the month for club openings. Pure Platinum, "a sophisticated adult nightclub," as it bills itself, had a grand opening last night on Kule, the site of the late Rascals club. Owners Fred Levy and Michael Peter, who plan to feature topless dancers, have similar clubs in various mainland cities. And on April 27, the Japanese owners of the huge Maharaja Restaurant and Disco will hold a pre-opening party in the Wai-kiki Trade Center. Peter Dietrich, who was at The Black Orchid, is the g.m. of the club. May a happier fate await both clubs than what befell Phase Seven, the disco which Eiji Nishimura — new owner of the Spencecliff chain — created and later closed in Canterbury Place.

AS part of its 10th-anniversary celebration, CSPAN is airing a "Viewer of the Week" vignette, profiling people who regularly tune in to the cable network. This week's viewer, it turns out, is from Hawaii — she's Vicky Chang, a 21-year-old college student, and her profiles are being aired daily on C-SPAN. Tone-Loc is the entertainer who appears Tuesday night in the cavernous Pier 10 baggage claim area, which his sponsors have somewhat magnanimously renamed the "Aloha Tower Pier 10 Ballroom" for the occasion. I must have been thinking about "Citizen Kane." Not only did I misspell the name of Rosewood Hotels president Atef Mankarios this week, I also said he was honcho of "Rosebud Hotels." Some days it doesn't pay to get up.

MUSICIAN Martin Denny and wife June celebrated his 78th birthday Monday at Tony Manzo's restaurant in the Niu Valley Shopping Center. Tony and his brother are opening a second pasta place soon in Restaurant Row. Memorable quote from Bill Conrad of "Jake and the Fatman" in this month's Honolulu magazine: "It wouldn't matter if I lost another 100 pounds, I'd still look heavy. The way my face is constructed, I always look like I'm smuggling walnuts in my cheeks." The ashes of Auntie Eva Pomroy, longtime receptionist at the Outrigger Canoe Club, were appropriately scattered at sea Sunday. Four-year-old Scotty Kekoa Silva took his first canoe ride with grandpa Cirilo Valera and State Rep. Fred Hemmings to witness the ceremony. Auntie Eva was his great-great-grandma.

IN ONE EAR: The state Senate's floor session was interrupted when House Speaker Dan Kihano walked over to award the senators the Banana Trophy, the ultra-prestigious symbol that went with the Senate's losing the big softball game, 12-11, against the House at Rainbow Stadium. Actress Stefanie Powers popped into town yesterday to visit a 77-yr.-old friend who is a patient at the St. Francis Hospital hospice center. I can't recall a lovelier catered dinner than the one prepared by Michele Hoins of In The Bag, which doubles as a private grocery shopping service. Michele comes by her business acumen naturally — dad Joe Ramia is president of Gentry Homes.

OUT THE OTHER: The Punahoa Punster, a chili chef of some renown, is v. excited about the Hawaii Kai Yacht Club's "Tax Mex Chili Cook-off" on April 15, naturally. Rick Barboza, an eighth grader at Kamehameha Schools, found a wallet containing more than $300 in cash on a road in Waimanalo. He brought it to school the next day and officials were able to contact a Kaneohe man, who got his wallet and cash back. With his new mustache, they're calling restaurateur Henry Loui "the Chinese Clark Gable." Not only is Anna Bannanas the first "cellular-free bar in Hawaii," patrons have also decreed that the place shall also remain free of fax machines — "lots of trivia facts, but no fax."

OUR TOWN: Give KPOI deejay Andy Preston credit for creativity, at least. But the "CNQTD" license plates he saw do not mean, as Andy surmised here yesterday, "seein' a cute doctor." Nor, says Lenore Kwok, who drives the car, do her plates stand for "Caution Terrible Driver," as someone else guessed. In fact, they advertise her hair salon, Conquistador. Dentist Joe Chang, in his Hawaii Dental Journal column, says that "DDS" must mean "duplicate dentists. We have two of each: Leslie Au, Harvey Chong, David Dung, James Higa, Harry Ishida, Richard Ikeda, Robert Ogawa, William Ohara, Ellsworth Takata and Joseph Yamamoto." Doc Chang says he's expecting triplets any time.

DIS AND DOT: Paul Stoudt, who started the Texas Panilo Cafe in Punaluu, is preparing for a speaking role in the upcoming film "Stagger Wing." He'll play the mayor of an Ozark town in the film, which will star Dwight Yocum and be directed by Hal Holbrook. Paul got the role through Harry Minetree, a frequent houseguest of Paul's, who wrote the screenplay. Among the champagnes to be tasted at the Duke Kahanamoku Foundation fund-raiser at the Outrigger Canoe Club on Mon. is Maison Deutz, described as the "new yuppie champagne." In fact, although Maison Deutz is on the menus at Roy's and Keo's-King Street, it is so popular on the Mainland that it won't be available here until next month — except for this tasting. Full circle dept.: Lynne Mueller's first job was at McDonald's-Hawaii Kai. She even won the distinguished title of "All-American French Fry" in a statewide employees contest. She's with McDonald's again, but this time handling the company's $3 million advertising account for Peck Sims Mueller.

ATTN OUTRIGGER Canoe Club: Some of your senior-citizen members (with physical problems) would appreciate consideration of a ramp or two to be constructed in the future for those who are bound to their wheelchairs. They also would like parking places for the disabled. Just being a messenger, folks. June Roy postcards: "That housing development next to a Navy munitions dump out Ewa Beach way could well turn into the biggest of Hawaii's housing booms!" Thrills abroad: While in Dusseldorf, Kailua travel writer Sheree Lipton enjoyed reading (in the Inter-Herald Trib) about Sen. Dan Inouye receiving the Horatio Alger Award. Sez Sheree: "Food here is ono. Potatoes as large as a kanaka's foot, stuffed with fresh-churned butter and cream, cost only $1.50. Street scenes: Musician Donald Yap jumping out of his car at a King Street sushi stand for a quick nibble before zooming off to his Punahou teaching duties. Worth a peek: Billy Al Bengston's exhibit at the Contemporary Art Museum on Makiki Heights Dr. Don't forget: The Wayne Harada Roast (April 30) at the Hon. Community Theatre. Benefits HCT. Folks I've talked to are happy gas is now selling by the gallon. See ya later. Amazing how popular C&K are in Guam. Sellout shows. Smoki Foods of Hawaii (all kinds of smoked fish) readying large export to Sashimiland. Quite a coup for the local establishment. Despite recent food scares — like the Chilean grapes — don't believe all the scary stories. Just look for evidence, sez Newsweek mag. And, to lessen your risk from any lingering pesticides, wash your fruits and vegetables with soap and water.

HOW ABOUT A LOUISVILLE SLUGGER WITH YOUR NAME ON IT? OK, it wasn't the greatest category. More than 50 voters left it blank. One wrote simply, "Get serious." But all seriousness aside, the winner in our Favorite Private Club category was that old mainstay on the beach, the Outrigger Canoe Club. Then came Oahu Country Club, the Honolulu Club, the Elks Club, Rumours and the Pacific Club. Hula's got a few votes. United's Red Carpet Club got a vote. International Fitness Center got a couple of sarcastic votes. Also mentioned was one of Ke'eumoku Street's most exclusive haunts, the Saigon Passion.
