OCC cruises to win Season opener is a runaway

By Dave Reardon

This wasn't exactly head coach-type work.

Just what the heck was Outrigger Canoe Club head coach Tom McTigue doing, anyway — treading water in the middle of Keehi Lagoon yesterday afternoon, starting his team's boat in the last three races?

"It was really the process of elimination," McTigue said. "I was the only one left."

After fruitlessly searching the beach for volunteers, McTigue swam out and held the canoe in place before the starting horns. He then watched as defending state champion OCC put the finishing touches on a runaway regatta-season-opening victory. Outrigger outdistanced second-place Kailua, 92:52.

Hui Nalu was third with 34 and host Healan fourth with 32.

Not finding starters was one of the few hitches yesterday for McTigue in his debut as head coach. But despite that, and the lopsided score, the pressure was still on the new coach.

"It's really hard," said Walter Guild, a former OCC head coach. "There's a tremendous amount of tradition to live up to. All the paddlers watch to see what the new coach does."

McTigue can probably expect a lot of hands-on duty this year. Participation is still down, and it's beginning to affect even Outrigger, the colos-sus of canoe clubs. There's not only a lack of support people. There are more empty seats than on the midnight bus. McTigue said many veteran paddlers have retired, at least from regatta racing, and the focus is on attracting young athletes.

"We want to get more kids involved," he said. "But this is a long day for them. They race early in the morning and don't stick around."

Nobody can blame them. Keehi Lagoon still looks like the quarry Fred Flintstone works in and is still an abominable dust bowl.

Still, Outrigger got some outstanding early-season performances. Women's coach Guild said he was pleased with his upper division crews.

OCC's women's freshman, senior, senior master and open crews were all victorious. "We're real happy with our upper-division women. We've been working hard for a resurgence from our women's crews," Guild said. "They've been struggling the last couple of years."

That doesn't include senior masters. They've won the state championship the past five years and haven't lost in a regatta since 1988.
