

SWIMMING SPLASHES

Bill Kahanamoku's picture, two column size, is in the San Francisco Chronicle for October 11 with the caption under it to the effect that Duke Kahanamoku's brother is going in for swimming in southern California.

The New Zealand girl swimmers, Gwitha Shand and Pauline Hoeft, will sail for the south a week from today on the steamer Makura.

Rosalie Abreu, the Valley Island swimmer who took part in the recent tank meet at Punahou, returned last night to Maui.

Christine and Kuualoha Keliipio of Hilo, who swam under the colors of the Hui Makani in the recent meet, leave today for the Big Island.

The showing of Elizabeth Quinn, Margarita Livingston and L. Chillingworth in the meet this week was mighty promising.

Connie Davis, Outrigger swimmer, is one of those who is going to break into the headlines in a year or so. She's full of fight.

All the girl swimmers of the islands are working hard now with the Los Angeles trip in view.

Sam Kahanamoku's showing against Warren Kealoha in the free style sprint the other night was one of the big surprises.

Everybody is pulling for Sam Kahanamoku to succeed his brother Duke as the fastest swimmer in sprint distances.

And now the old stop-watch can be put away in the collar box with the cuff links and frat pins for awhile.
