SWIMMING SPLASHES

Tickets for the Washington Swimming meet, February 21, 22 and 24, are selling at Benson, Smith & Co. and are reported to be going fast.

Center saw the navy swimming team in action the other day and has a world of praise for it.

Ruth Scudder may not be able to swim in the breaststroke and backstroke events this meet due to pains in her side, but will go into the crawl numbers.

Watch out for this fellow Call from Fort Shafter is the word being passed along the line. He's a nifty swimmer.

Nobody seems to be able to figure out the dreamy look in Mariechen Wehselau's eye, but maybe she has it fixed on some record.

The Fort Shafter relay team has been doing the 400 yards in 4:29, which is within a few seconds of the record.

By adding the 100 yards breaststroke for men on Wednesday night a chance is being given Sam Kahanamoku of the Hui Nalus to break a record.

The navy has two good men in Kane and Kamana for the sprint distances.

Dan Mooney's son is making good as a swimmer with the Olympic club. He was a member of the Outrigger club while here.

Handsome cups are being put up for the relays in the coming swimming meet.
