THREE TEAMS ARE TO PLAY WATER POLO

Sport to Be Revived With Washington Aquatic Meet in the Harbor This Week

Surfers Had Goal Out For Practise At the Waikiki Beach Sunday Afternoon

ATER polo is being revived in connection with the Washington swimming meet, scheduled Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday nights in Honolulu harbor. The sport was played here in a small way some years ago but never acquired sufficient popularity to have a league of teams formed. Now that the game is being revived it may continue to grow and eventually there may be a league formed and the sport put on the island calender.

The three teams entered include the Outrigger Canoe club, Hui Nalu and Luke Field. It had been expected that only two teams would enter and the game would be staged Wednesday night, but the entry of a third team makes it necessary for the committee in charge to rearrange the program, in so far as water polo is concerned.

To Decide

The games committee of the meet is meeting today for the purpose of setting the hours of play and also for handling the last details in connection with the meet.

The Outrigger Canoe club built a water polo goal and took it out into deep water yesterday afternoon and staged a practise. The Hui Nalu held a practise without a goal. Luke Field is reported to have a strong water polo team.
