SWIMMING SPLASHES

Jupe Pluvius was also among those present at the third night of the Washington Swimming meet.

The first race on the program was plenty long enough to give all the fans a chance to get their seats. It was a mile for women.

Some of the folks on the starting barge complained of getting seasick, the barge swayed so with the waves that seemed somehow to find their way into the slip.

George "Dad" Center wore his green cap to bring good luck to the Outrigger Canoe club swimmers.

"Stop rocking the boat," cautioned Announcer Dr. Charles Barton to several of those on the starting barge as the old scow moved up and down.

The rain did not interfere with the music and the bands kept up their playing despite all the efforts to Jupe Pluvius to quiet them.

In spite of the rain there was a good turnout of fans. The umbrellas were plentiful in the stands.

There were more people on the barge than usual, the rain shelters drawing many of them there.

"Beans" Waters and Crabbe worked the ropes and "Beans" nearly went in several times.

Lillie Bowmer's best alibi when she loses a race is that her dimples interfere with her progress. Not so bad!

Lillie Bowmer was caught in 28 flat at the 50 yards on her way to the 100 yards.

The relay for officers was swum across the slip and created plenty of excitement.

Mariechen Wehselau was ill and unable to perform in the hundred, otherwise there is no doubt that she would have either broken or forced Lillie to break the world record.

Ruth Scudder finished third in the century, swimming her fastest hundred. Look out for Janice Lovett in future races. She was right on top of Lillie Bowmer all the way.

Every day in every way the Outrigger Canoe club swimmers are getting better and better.

Constance Davis, after swimming the mile, had enough energy left to spring breaststroke from the rope to the starting barge.

Janice Lovett, Outrigger swimmer, presented the scribe of these notes with a rosebud in token of appreciation for calling her "a golden-haired beauty" in a recent write-up. Maybe this will bring a regular bouquet.

The details were well looked after. Hot dogs and coffee was provided by Lieut. Col. H. L. Landers for the officials and the press.

Among those first to put in an appearance at the hot dog stand on the starting barge was Doc Adams and Ruth Stakcer.

The Outrigger girls were all begging the beautiful ribbons worn by officials on the idea of seeing which could collect the greatest number.

Incidentally it was Doc Adams who suggested Thursday to Col. H. L. Landers that the only thing lacking to make the meet a complete success was hot dogs and coffee.

Ruth Scudder was caught in 1:06 in the hundred, despite the fact that she has been through all kinds of illnesses in the last few years.

OVERTIME GO

By a score of 9-7 the Nippons beat the O. P. team yesterday in an 11-inning affair.
