Water Carnival To End Day of Commemoration of Kamehameha on June 11

A novel water carnival in honor of Kamehameha the Great will be staged the night of June 11—Kamehameha Day—in Honolulu harbor, the Kamehameha Day committee has decided.

This committee is composed of representatives from each of the Hawaiian societies in Honolulu, with Edgar Henriques as chairman.

Instead of winding up the day's celebration with a ball at the armory, the committee decided to have a public water carnival in which outrigger canoes and other boats are to be used. The navy is to co-operate closely with the committee and will probably have many and unique entries.

The committee will meet this evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Library of Hawaii to prepare detailed plans for June 11.

A full attendance of the presidents and secretaries of each member society in the general committee is requested tonight as there is much work to be done. Edgar Henriques, chairman of the committee, said yesterday that from the way things are shaping, this year's celebration is going to be the best that the Hawaiian societies have ever given.

The program includes a daylight procession of Hawaiian societies and exercises at Iolani palace, including a march around the statue of Kamehameha in front of the judiciary building. The Warriors' society, according to custom, will have a guard of honor around the statue during the procession.
