Three World Record in Peril of Slash Tonight At Final Swim Sessions

Ederle Will Compete In 440 Meters for Women In An Effort To Shatter Her Own Spectacular Time

THREE world records are in imminent danger of being broken tonight at the last session of the October Swimming meet.

Gertrude Ederle, Gotham swimming star who Thursday night definitely established her supremacy as the world's greatest woman swimmer in all distances, will take a wallop at her own world record of 5:53.1 in the 440 meters women's open event. This race will be her last appearance in Hawaii.

Warren Kealoha, the greatest swimmer ever developed in Hawaii, and ranked together with Johnny Weismuller, as one of the greatest swimmers in the world today, will try for the world record in the 100 meters freestyle. The open water record is 1:00.2, held by Duke Kahanamoku. Weismuller has made :58.3 in a tank swim.

The Hui Makani relay team will make a drive at the world record for the 800 meters relay, and judging from the way they have been swimming during the meet, stand a good chance to crack the mark of 10:4.2 set by the United States team in 1920. The Hui Nalu team is not rated as the strongest this year, but will give the former club competition, which should bring out the best in them.

LAST HOPE

Hawaii's last hope is Helen Moses, Outrigger swimmer and an Olympic veteran, who Wednesday night finished scarcely four yards behind the New York girl, and was gaining at every stroke before she touched the finish. Miss Moses is one of the best long distance woman swimmers in the game today, and from her recent performances, looks like the only person who has any chance to assail Gertrude Ederle in the middle distances.

Gertrude Ederle has decisively defeated Hawaii's best talent, making the 200 meters and 100 meters free style after gruelling battles with the local mermaids. In each event she was forced to break a record by Mariechen Wehselau. She now carries with her the honor of being the undefeated woman swimming champion of the world. She has to her credit every swimming record from the 100 meters up to the 1500 meters.

BIG EVENTS

Two events will be run off tonight which establish American and probably world records, as these events have never been competed in before. They will be staged at Paris in next year's Olympic Games for the first time. The events are the 100 meters backstroke for women and the 200 meters breaststroke for women.

In the first event, Lillie Bowmer is regarded as the favorite over Dorothy Waters, with Helen Ellis figured to give both a close run. In the latter event, Helen Moses and Dorothy Waters will fight for the victory. Miss Waters defeated Helen last Thursday in the century breaststroke, but the finish was so close, that either has a chance to win tonight.

There will also be a 100 meters service free style race tonight that should provide some of the hottest competition of the meet. The service swimmers have been working up in the hall of fame, and there are a number of hopefuls who are expected to give the local lights a tough scrap for honors in the near future.
