

THE upper picture is of the Outrigger Canoe Club grounds and club houses shortly after its organization in 1908. Notice the peculiar shape of the surf boards, the old grass houses, and the bathing suits of the fair sex. The figure in the center, with hands in pockets and in Napoleonic pose, is none other than Alexander Hume Ford, who, in those days, boasted a much heavier set of whiskers. Below is a picture of Waikiki Beach about 1904. The Moana hotel was then a mere pup lacking in those days its two imposing wings. Dear old Heinie's tavern is seen on the right of the picture, with its dining pavilion extending over the water.
