THE WEEKLY Sunday jam session at the Hawaiian Village was enlivened this week when Al Hirt showed up. Decked out in an open shirt, he amazed ringsiders by keeping time with his piko . . . Sonny Burke says he thinks the injury Hirt suffered to his lip in the New Orleans Mardi Gras parade has helped the trumpeter's career in the long run, inasmuch as it has taught him how to play softly again . . . Hirt and Burke were lunching at the Outrigger Canoe Club the other day with actor Bill Conrad. The three then got in a car to ride to the Ala Moana Shopping Center. Seconds after they departed, Hirt fell fast asleep on Burke's shoulder. As they reached the center and got out, Hirt remarked in dead earnest, "You know, I can't relax while riding in a car." Burke, who had been playing pillow for ten minutes or so, almost died laughing. Conrad, meanwhile, bought his old pal Burke a Ken Shutt bird sculpture for his birthday—nearly bringing the musical arranger to tears . . . And mutual friend Roger Carroll purchased a Shutt sculpture of three porpoises to take back to L.A. No, they were not crossed porpoises! . . .

THE PROMOTER of a recent rock concert and light show reports he paid the rock group's tab without flinching, but was a little disturbed at the charge of the light brigade . . . The Raven Brothers, a group which started out in Honolulu and has been playing such spots as P.J.'s and the Factory in Hollywood, are returning for the first time in two years or so to lay down dancing sounds at Alice's Restaurant in the Reef Hotel.
