"You're an Old Kamaaina if you recall when the Young Hotel dining room had silky linen and quiet service of old Japanese waiters and lovely Napua Stevens sang with the Giggie Royse band in the roof-garden; the Moana Dining Room was on stilts over the beach; the Waikiki Tavern was the site of the Beach Broadcasts on Saturday afternoons; Errol Flynn and Bing Crosby bopped around town and Mickey Rooney was a small boy with his entourage and Judy Canova came and got married; you could always tell a soldier or sailor by the rumpled aloha shirt he kept in a Hotel St. locker club; the old Hawaiian Book Exchange on Nuuanu where the literati browsed; there were old houses along Kalakaua in neat little yards where hotel towers are now; the Outrigger Club was a shack on the beach near the Steiner mansion; poi, pipikaula and lomi salmon was 45 cents at the little lunchroom a few doors from the tumble-down, open-air church on the beach..."
